PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE SUPREME COURT OF NORTH CAROLINA

Petitioner prays that a writ of certiorari issue to review the judgment of the Supreme Court of North Carolina entered in the above entitled case on March 28, 1962.

Citations To Opinions Below

The judgment of the Superior Court of Alamance County was entered without opinion. The opinion of the Supreme Court of North Carolina (R p. 12), printed in Appendix hereto, infra, p. 12, is reported in N. C. , 124 S.E. 2d 728.

Jurisdiction

The judgment of the Supreme Court of North Carolina was entered on March 28, 1962. R p. 12;

p. 12, infra. The jurisdiction of this court is invoked under 28 U.S.C., Section 1257 (3).

The issue presented in this petition for a writ of certiorari was not raised as a federal question in the State Courts below for the following reasons. In the trial of the petitioner in the General County Court of Alamance County February 20, 1961, and again in the Alamance County Superior Court on March 8, 1961, the question of the sufficiency of the search warrant involved in the prosecution of the petitioner was raised by a motion to suppress the evidence on the ground that it was obtained under a defective and illegal search warrant. (R. p. 24). The question of the sufficiency of the warrant to meet the requirements of the Fourth, Fifth, and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States was not raised because prior decisions of this court, including Wolf v. Colorado, 338 U.S. 25 (1949), had made it clear beyond any doubt that this was not a federal constitutional question. After the petitioner had been convicted in the General County Court of Alamance County and in a trial de novo in the Alamance County Superior Court, and after the record on appeal to the North Carolina Supreme Court had been made up and filed, this court handed down the opinion in Mapp vs. Ohio, 367 U.S. 643 (1961), holding "that all evidence obtained by searches and seizures in violation of the constitution is, by that same authority, inadmissible in a state court." Mapp v. Ohio, 367 U.S. 643, at 655.

Questions Presented

1. Whether Mapp v. Ohio, 367 U.S. 643 (1961), which overruled Wolf v. Colorado, 338 U.S. 25 (1949), has any retroactive effect.

2. Whether the failure to raise the issue involved in this case as a federal constitutional question in the state courts below precludes the petitioner from raising the constitutional issue on petition for writ of certiorari to this court.

3. Whether a conviction based totally on the admission of evidence obtained by a search and seizure under a warrant which fails to specify the place to be searched is violative of the due process provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment.

Constitutional Provision and Statutes Involved

The constitutional provisions involved are: United States Constitution, Fourth Amendment, Fifth Amendment and Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1, set out in Appendix hereto, infra, p. 9. The statutory provisions involved are 28 U.S.C., Section 257 (3); United States Supreme Court Rule 23 (1), (f); and North Carolina General Statutes, Section 18-13, set out in Appendix hereto, infra, p. 10.

Statement

The petitioner, M. B. Thompson, was arrested on December 17, 1960, on a warrant charging him with unlawfully and wilfully keeping in his possession illegal intoxicating liquor for the purpose of sale. The evidence upon which this charge was based in the Alamance General County Court, the Superior Court of Alamance County and the Supreme Court of North Carolina was obtained by a search under a warrant for search and seizure of intoxicating liquor. (See Appendix hereto, infra, p. 24).

Petitioner was tried on this charge February 20, 1961, in the Alamance General County Court, found guilty, and given a suspended sentence on condition that he pay a fine of one hundred dollars ($100.00) and costs. He appealed to the Superior Court of Alamance County and on March 8, 1961, was found guilty after a trial de novo and sentenced to six months in the County jail to be assigned to work under the state prison department. He then appealed to the North Carolina Supreme Court which found no error in State v. Mack B. Thompson—N.C. 124 S.E. 2d 728 (1962). (See Appendix hereto, infra, p. 35).

In the Alamance General County Court and in the Superior Court of Alamance County the Petitioner contended that the search warrant was defective on its face in that it failed to meet the requirements of North Carolina General Statutes, Section 18-13, and North Carolina Constitution, Article I, Section 15, that the place to be searched be described with particularity. (R. p. 27).

Reasons For Granting The Writ

This case involves substantial questions affecting important constitutional rights.

1. The writ of certiorari should be granted because the issue of whether a criminal defendant is protected by a decision re-construing his constitutional rights after he has been convicted in state courts of limited and general jurisdiction is an issue which has not been authoritatively settled by this Court. Norton v. Shelby County, 118 U.S. 425 (1886); Chicot County Drainage District v. Baxter State Bank, 308 U.S. 371 (1940). Although Norton v. Shelby County, cited supra, dealt with the constitutionality of a statute, the case squarely held that no rights could be gained or acquired under the statute even prior to the declaration of its unconstitutionality because, in legal contemplation, such a statute is as inoperative as though it had never been passed, and petitioner believes that this principle may apply as well to a judicial decision overruled because unconstitutional. On the other hand, the Chicot County Drainage District case, cited supra, indicated that the petitioner may be estopped by the principle of res judicata. These two cases seem to indicate a possible conflict in decisions of this court on an issue material to the constitutional rights of the petitioner.

2. The failure to raise the issue involved in this case as a federal constitutional question in the courts below should not preclude the petitioner from raising the constitutional issue on petition for writ of certiorari to this court because at the time of the trial of this case the admission of evidence obtained by an illegal search and seizure was not proscribed by the federal constitution. Indeed, counsel for petitioner was no doubt deterred by the law as it stood prior to June 19, 1961, and as represented by Wolf v. Colorado, 338 U.S. 25. In fact, in Mezzatesta v. Delaware, 199 F. Supp. 494 (D. Del. Nov. 16, 1961) the United States District Court, in an application for writ of habeas corpus from a pre-Mapp v. Ohio, 367 U.S. 643, conviction, indicated that petition for writ of certiorari to this court would be the proper remedy for petitioner rather than habeas corpus, in the following language:

> Petitioners must first have exhausted available state remedies. Mazzatesta and Williams have made no application for a writ of certiorari to issue from the United States Supreme Court. . . . Counsel in oral argument stated that the long standing rule of the Supreme Court as laid down in Wolf v. People of the State of Colorado . . . deterred him from applying for the writ of certiorari as to issues related to the admission of evidence allegedly illegally seized in connection with the State criminal action. But this is no cogent reason for the present court to allow petitioners to circumvent the rule with respect to application for certiorari.

3. A conviction based totally on the admission of evidence obtained by a search and seizure under a warrant which fails to specify the place to be searched is believed to be violative of the due process provisions of the Fourteenth Amendment. Petitioner's contention is posited on the assumption that the search warrant under which the evidence was obtained for his conviction is defective in that it fails to describe the place to be searched with sufficient particularity.

In as much as Mapp v. Ohio, 367 U.S. 643, dealt with a search and seizure without a warrant, petitioner's query is whether the principle enunciated in the Mapp case will cover a case involving the admission of evidence obtained in a search and seizure made under a warrant defective for the reason that it failed to particularize the place to be searched. It would seem that the question presented here is of importance in the administration of state criminal procedure. Settlement of the question by this court is plainly in the public interest since it is likely to be presented in many state criminal proceedings involving search and seizure, perhaps including many cases now pending.

Since Mapp v. Ohio was based on the Fourth and perhaps Fifth amendments, it would seem that a search warrant used in State criminal proceedings must now meet the requisites of the Fourth Amendment. One of these requisites is the specification of the place to be searched.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, for the foregoing reason, it is respectfully submitted that the petition for a writ of certiorari should be granted.

Respectfully submitted,

GENERAL STATUTE OF NORTH CAROLINA 18-13

Search warrants; disposal of liquor, equipment and materials seized.—Upon the filing of a complaint under oath by a reputable citizen, or information furnished under oath by an officer charged with the execution of the law, before a justice of the peace, recorder, mayor, or other officer authorized by the law to issue warrants, that he has reason to believe that any person has in his possession, at a place or places specified, liquor for the purpose of sale, or equipment or materials designed or intended for use in the manufacture of intoxicating liquor, a warrant shall be issued commanding the officer to whom it is directed to search the place or places described in such complaint or information; and if such liquor, or equipment or materials designed or intended for use in the manufacture of intoxicating liquor, be found in any such place or places, to seize and take into his custody all such liquor, and to seize and take into his custody all glasses, bottles, jugs, pumps, bars, or other equipment used in the business of selling or manufacturing intoxicating liquor which may be found at such place or places, and to keep the same

All liquor, and all equipment or materials designed or intended for use in the manufacture of intoxicating liquor, seized under this section shall be held and shall upon the acquittal of the person so charged be returned to the established owner, and shall within ten days upon conviction or default of appearance of such person be destroyed: Provided that any tax-paid liquor so seized shall within ten days be turned over to the board of county commissioners, which shall within ninety days from the receipt thereof turn it over to hospitals for medicinal purposes, or sell it to legalized alcoholic beverage control stores within the State of North Carolina, the proceeds of such sale being placed in the school fund of the county in which such seizure was made, or destroy it. NORTH CAROLINA SUPREME COURT

Spring Term 1962

No. 721—Alamance

STATE

v.

MACK B. THOMPSON

Appeal by defendant from Clark, J., March Criminal Term, 1961, of Alamance, docketed and argued as No. 721 at Fall Term, 1961.

Criminal prosecution on warrant charging that defendant, on December 17, 1960, unlawfully and wilfully "did have and keep in his possession illegal intoxicating liquors, to wit: 21 pints tax paid whiskey for the purpose of sale, located in the Orange Bowl, Supper Club, Mebane, N. C., contrary to the form of the statute . . ."

Upon trial de novo in the Superior Court (on appeal by defendant from conviction and judgment in the General County Court of Alamance County), the only evidence was that offered by the State. It consists of the testimony of John Crabtree and Wade Montgomery, each a Deputy Sheriff of Alamance County, and tends to show the facts stated below.

On December 17, 1960, and prior thereto, defendant was the owner of premises on which he operated a place of business known as the Orange Bowl Supper Club. The business was conducted in "a long building," in which there was a dance hall, tables, a piccolo, a stage, dressing rooms, and a kitchen. There was "a bar type structure in the dance floor," with a counter approximately twenty to thirty feet long. A door behind the counter "leads in the kitchen." The kitchen had a window "about four or five feet wide where they put orders through."

On the night of December 17, 1960, the officers, under authority of a warrant therefor, searched the said premises. In brown paper bags, sitting on the floor of the kitchen near the refrigerator, there were twenty-one full (sealed) pints of different kinds of tax paid whiskey. In a five-gallon bucket (used as a trash can) under the end of the kitchen table, there were five or more empty whiskey bottles, "with the odor of whiskey in them," and a number of small paper cups. Numerous "whiskey cups, about 3-oz. paper cups," were "at the end of the table," and "five empty bottles and cups (were) out under the counter."

When the search was made, "there was one man at the counter and there were some musicians on the stage and several people were back at the door." Defendant was not on the premises when the search was made. Later, he stated "he had gone to get his cook."

Deputy Sheriff Montgomery testified: "He (defendant) came up twice while his case was pending in County Court and wanted to know if it would be satisfactory with us if he would plead guilty to illegal possession and we said that was up to the Court whether they would accept it or not."

The jury found the defendant "Guilty as charged in the warrant," and judgment was pronounced as appears in the record. Defendant excepted and appealed.

Attorney General Bruton and Assistant Attorney General Rountree for the State.

Walter D. Barrett, M. Hugh Thompson and William A. Marsh, Jr., for defendant, appellant.

BOBBITT, J. The only assignment of error brought forward and discussed in defendant's brief is based on his exception to the overruling of his motion for judgment as in case of nonsuit. Hence, all other assignments of error are deemed abandoned. Rule 28, Rules of Practice in the Supreme Court, 254 N.C. 783, 810.

The only question presented by a motion under GS 15-173 for judgment as in case of nonsuit is whether the evidence is sufficient to require submission to the jury. S. v. Green, 251 NC 40, 110 SE 2d 609. In passing on such motion, "the evidence is to be considered in the light most favorable to the State, and the State is entitled to the benefit of every reasonable intendment thereon and every reasonable inference to be drawn therefrom." S. v. Corl, 250 NC 252, 108 SE 2d 608.

Clearly, if the twenty-one pints of whiskey were in the actual or constructive possession of defendant, there was ample evidence to support the verdict. GS 18-32; S. v. Rogers, 252 NC 499, 114 SE 2d 355, and cases cited.

Defendant contends the evidence is insufficient to support a finding that the twenty-one pints of whiskey were in defendant's constructive possession.

As to what constitutes constructive possession, Varser, J., in S. v. Meyers, 190 NC 239, 129 SE 600, said: "If the liquor was within the power of the defendant, in such a sense that he could and did command its use, the possession was as complete within the meaning of the statute as if his possession had been actual." This statement has been quoted with approval in later cases, e.g., S. v. Harrelson, 245, NC 604; 606, 96 SE 2d 867. It is stated in S. v. Taylor, 250 NC 363, 366, 108 SE 2d 629: ". . . if nontaxpaid whiskey is on a person's premises with his knowledge and consent, he has constructive possession thereof while it remains on premises under his exclusive control."

Even so, defendant contends the circumstantial evidence upon which the State relies is insufficient to show defendant had constructive possession of the twenty-one pints of whiskey in that the facts shown are not inconsistent with defendant's innocence.

In S. v. Stephens, 244 NC 380, 383, 93 SE 2d 431, this Court, in opinion by Higgins, J., said: "We are advertent to the intimation in some of the decisions involving circumstantial evidence that to withstand a motion for nonsuit the circumstances must be inconsistent with innocence and must exclude every reasonable hypothesis except that of guilt. We think the correct rule is given in S. v. Simmons, 240 NC 780, 83 SE 2d 904, quoting from S. v. Johnson, 199 NC 429, 154 SE 730: 'If there be any evidence tending to prove the fact in issue or which reasonably conduces to its conclusion as a fairly logical and legitimate deduction, and not merely such as raises a suspicion or conjecture in regard to it, the case should be submitted to the jury.' The above is another way of saying there must be substantial evidence of all material elements of the offense to withstand the motion to dismiss. It is immaterial whether the substantial evidence is circumstantial or direct, or both. To hold that the court must grant a motion to dismiss unless, in the opinion of the court, the evidence excludes every reasonable hypothesis of innocence would in effect constitute the presiding judge the trier of the facts. Substantial evidence of guilt is required before the court can send the case to the jury. Proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt is required before the jury can convict. What is substantial evidence is a question of law for the court. What that evidence proves or fails to prove is a question of fact for the jury."

Under the rule stated in S. v. Stephens, supra, and approved in later decisions, this Court is of opinion, and so decides, that there was substantial and therefore sufficient evidence to support a finding that the twenty-one pints of whiskey were in the constructive possession of defendant and to support a verdict of guilty. Hence, defendant's motion for judgment as in case of nonsuit was properly overruled.

In S. v. Hunt, 253 NC 811, 117 SE 2d 752, cited by defendant, decision was based on a materially different factual situation.

No error.

Sharp, J., took no part in the consideration or decision of this case.

MR. BARRETT:

Q Mr. Crabtree, is this the search warrant you searched under?

A It is.

The defendant would like to make a motion to suppress State's evidence obtained under that search warrant.

Motion denied—Exception.

EXCEPTION No. 4.

(Search warrant appears in the Record, p. 24).

Q What did you find, Mr. Crabtree, at the Orange Bowl?

Objection—Overruled—Exception.

EXCEPTION No. 5.

A There in the kitchen part of the supper club, on the floor in brown paper bags, were 21 pints of different kinds of taxpaid whiskey with whiskey store stamps on them. The defendant was not present at the time I found the liquor. I had been to this place of business about two weeks before. The defendant was present on that occasion and we went in and talked to Mack and he showed us around the building. He invited us to look around the building with him. He showed us the stage, dressing rooms, kitchen and the equipment and around over the place.

I had a conversation with the defendant on that evening and he said, "We are going to run this," and this man Coleman's name was included in the search warrant. Mack said, "Coleman is going to help manage it for me." Mr. Coleman was there at the time we were talking, but he was not there on the night of December 17th when we found the 21 pints. At the time we found the 21 pints, there was one man at the counter and there were some musicians on the stage and several people were back at the door. I did not count them, several folks around. Mack talked with me several times after this about this charge and he said that on the night we found the whiskey he had gone to get his cook. He did not say anything about being at this place of business on this particular date, December 17th.

CROSS EXAMINATION

At the time when I was there, two weeks prior to December 17, this Coleman and several other people were around, and Mack told me that the Orange Bowl Supper Club was a club and since that time he has told me that it is a membership club. It is designated as the Orange Bowl Supper Club in the warrant.

COURT: You said that when you went in this place, at that time, there were 21 pints in the kitchen?

A Yes, sir; they were setting on the floor in paper bags over near the refrigerator, all in full pints, seals on them, no whiskey open, and we found no other whiskey there.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION (By Mr. Cooper)

I found some empty bottles and some cups and a five-gallon bucket in the kitchen. I believe eight empty pint whiskey bottles and small paper cups—I did not count the number of cups.

COURT: What basket you talking about these eight empty bottles were in?

A Five-gallon, what they were using for disposal of garbage.

COURT: A trash barrel?

A Yes, sir.

COURT: Where were these trash cans?

A There was one in the kitchen and one under the counter just out of the kitchen.

COURT: Both inside the house; is that correct?

A Yes, sir.

WADE MONTGOMERY testified:

I am and was Deputy Sheriff of Alamance County on December 17, 1960, and accompanied Mr. Crabtree to the Orange Bowl on that evening. I went into the kitchen of the establishment.

Q What did you find in there?

Objection—Overruled—Exception.

EXCEPTION No. 6.

A 21 pints of taxpaid whiskey. The bottles had the liquor store stamps on them of the same date that we were there. I found in the kitchen five empty whiskey bottles with the odor of whiskey in them in a five-gallon bucket under the end of the kitchen table and at the end of the table numerous whiskey cups, about 3-oz. paper cups; also found five empty bottles and cups out under the counter.

There is a bar type structure in the dance floor and they have a counter that runs approximately 20 to 30 feet long and it has a door you can come around behind the counter that leads in the kitchen, and the kitchen has a window about four or five feet wide where they put orders through. I was at this place one week before we found the whiskey and talked with the defendant and he said that it was his and that he and Coleman were going to run it. Mr. Thompson showed me all over the place and we met Coleman and he carried us back and showed us the stage, rest rooms, and carried us back in the kitchen.

A few days after we indicted Mack for the whiskey, he said Coleman was not there any more, he left the week before. I did not talk with the defendant about his whereabouts on the night we went there, Mr. Crabtree did.

I have had conversations with the defendant subsequent to his arrest as to the charges against him. He came up twice while his case was pending in County Court and wanted to know if it would be satisfactory with us if he would plead guilty to illegal possession and we said that was up to the Court whether they would accept it or not.

CROSS EXAMINATION (By Mr. Barrett)

I saw Mack about one week before the time I arrested him. I saw him every few days, but did not have a conversation with him.
